THE apparition of these faces in the crowd; Petals on a wet, black bough. Sun, 11 Nov 2018 15:41:00 GMT 106. In a Station of the Metro - saylor.org - "In a Station of the Metro"™, written by Ezra Pound in 1913, is the Imagist poem par excellence. In just two lines, Pound distills the entire manifesto for Imagism into a vivid piece of poetry, what T. E. Hulme had earlier called "dry, hard, classical verse"™. Sun, 11 Nov 2018 14:22:00 GMT A Short Analysis of Ezra Pound's "In a Station of the Metro"™ - Metro Santiago. The Metro de Santiago first opened in Chile in 1975, and today currently serves around 2,300,000 people every day, making it the second longest in Latin America and the 4th largest in the Americas by annual passenger rides. The Santiago metro system is very safe, clean, efficient, and reliable. Mon, 12 Nov 2018 12:55:00 GMT The Santiago Metro System | SantiagoChile.com - By juxtaposing two concrete, exact images, Mr. Pound created a poem that strikes an immediate chord to the aware reader. The petals set against the black bough illustrate the feeling the poet had when he saw beautiful, vibrant faces against the cold, colorless backdropp of a station of the Metro.
